

*A Portrait of Ann Miller Tompkins (1813-1894) by Ammi Phillips (1788-1865).
Joan R. Brownstein: American Folk Paintings. Image courtesy of TAAS.*

Famille Rose wine coolers with scalloped rim and elegant floral decoration. Small chip to tip of one handle of each, otherwise very fine condition. 5½" tall, circa 1750-60. Polly Latham, Boston, MA. Image courtesy of Caskey Lees (The New York Ceramics Fair).

An art deco period luxury automobile mascot (hood ornament) in the form of a stylized, airborne peacock by G. Poitvin, in nickel plated bronze, French, circa 1925. Image courtesy of Stella Show Management (Antiques at the Armory Show).

Americana Week Antiques Shows

New York Ceramics Fair, January 18, 2011
Bohemian National Hall 321 East 73rd Street, NYC
For information call 310.455.2886 or visit www.caskeylees.com

The American Antiques Show, January 20-23, 2011;
Preview: January 19, 2011
The Metropolitan Pavilion, 125 West 18th Street, NYC
For information call 860.434.1167
or visit www.theamericanantiquesshow.org

Winter Antiques Show, January 21-30, 2011
Park Avenue Armory, 67th Street and Park Avenue, NYC
For information call 718.292.7392 or visit www.winterantiquesshow.com
See page 24 for more information.

Antiques at the Armory, January 21-23, 2011
69th Regiment Armory, Lexington at 26th Street, NYC

Americana & Antiques at the Piers, January 22-23, 2011
Pier 92, 12th Avenue at 55th Street, NYC
For information call 973.808.5015 or visit www.stellashows.com

Winter brings an influx of art and antiques shows to New York in January. Boasting a new venue for 2011, this year's New York Ceramics Fair will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Bohemian National Hall. Drawing exhibitors from England, Europe, and across America, the Ceramics Fair offers a wide-range of "fired" works including porcelain, pottery, glass, cloisonné and enamels. A lecture series covering such topics as 18th century tableware and drinking vessels, Chinese armorial porcelain, and the importance of the turning lathe, will be held in the Hall's cinema/lecture hall during the run of the show.

The American Antiques Show (TAAS), now in its tenth year, is an annual benefit for the American Folk Art Museum. Works include folk art, furniture, fine and decorative arts, jewelry, ceramics, silver, arts and crafts, and American Indian art.

Part of Americana Week in New York since 1995, Antiques at the Armory features nearly 100 dealers specializing in fine and affordable American and European antiques, furniture, Americana, folk art, fine art, and prints. Antiques at the Armory overlaps with another New York mainstay, Americana at the Piers; both shows are organized by Stella Show Management. Known for its boldness, Americana at the Piers includes outsider art, art glass, industrial design and furniture, art deco furnishings, and mid-20th century works as well as more traditional pieces. With 200 exhibiting antiques dealers, it is the largest and most expansive show at Americana Week.

For more information on the Winter Antiques Show, see page 24.